Francis Bacon, the State, and the Reform of Natural ... Julian Martin argues that Bacon's proposals for reforms in law, government, and natural philosophy "shared the same structures, the same technique, and the same technology.

They were, after all, products of the same mind" (3). That the same mind could hold radically different ideas, conceived at varying levels of abstraction, and resulting in quite distinct forms of activity, is a possibility.

Francis Bacon, the State and the Reform of Natural ... Bacon's axiom that 'Knowledge is Power' takes on far-reaching implications in Martin's challenging argument that the reform of natural philosophy was a central part of an audacious plan to strengthen the powers of the Crown in the State.
