The Moving Target (Lew Archer #1) by Ross Macdonald

The Moving Target is the second Ross Macdonald book I've read this summer (Instant Enemy was the other). I still don't know much of Mr. Macdonald outside of his brief bio and cool, lean cop-meets-journalist-meets insurance salesman jacket picture, but I want to learn more. His The Moving Target: Amazon.ca: Ross Macdonald: Books

The Moving Target, originally published in 1949, is Ross MacDonald's first Lew Archer novel. While Archer's character has yet to fully blossom, most of MacDonald's typical story devices are represented; an interconnected trail of escalating violence, innocent youth, dual identities and a twist ending that makes you rethink the entire novel. The Moving Target by Ross Macdonald - Penguin Random House

About The Moving Target. The first book in Ross Macdonald's acclaimed Lew Archer series introduces the detective who redefined the role of the American private eye and gave the crime novel a psychological depth and moral complexity only hinted at before.

I Read a Book Once: The Moving Target by Ross MacDonald (5/5)

The Moving Target by Ross MacDonald. It's a Noir novel from 1949, the first in the Lew Archer series of hardboiled mysteries. It follows the stylistic trail blazed by Raymond Chandler, so I guess the book itself isn't all that original, but I'm in love with Raymond Chandler, so why would I complain? I love it all the private investigator with a sense of justice, the nihilistic take on
